Dr Rina Ramdev elaborating on gender stereotypes

The workshop focused on creating awareness for both faculty and students with respect to casual sexism, gender training, and sexual harassment. The workshop was followed by an informative discussion, and personal stories shared by some of the teachers and the students gave the attendees a lot of food for thought.

Students attending the seminar

Students further nuanced the discussion on consent by saying that ‘looking for a definite yes instead of a no when it comes to consent’ would create greater clarity in interpersonal relations. How advertisements portray men as the knowledgeable ones who teach women how to do household chores when in reality, only a small number of men are involved in household duties was also discussed.

Students asking questions to Dr Rina Ramdev

To summarise, the workshop proved to be a success, and led to some interesting conversations that students are sure to think more about.
