He called for forging new partnerships among countries of the Global South to build resilient supply chains, increase trade and promote tourism and India is open to enter into Preferential Trade Agreements with interested countries in the South.

In this regard, he urged for enhanced trade linkages for the mutual benefit of all our countries. Mentioning that India is providing unilateral duty-free market access to the least-developed countries (LDCs) since 2008 through the duty-free tariff preference (DFTP) scheme of India, he said that India is also open to enter into Preferential Trade Agreements (PTAs) with interested countries in the South.

He also said that many countries of the South have huge deposits of these resources and emphasised on work closely to use such resources for the benefit of the South. He concluded by stating that India is ready to share its development experience with the global South, and is eager to learn from other fellow countries and bring forth the matters of common concern for further discussion and cooperation towards joint sustainable and inclusive growth.
