REPORT

The session on career opportunities in education was marked by insightful discussions and valuable takeaways. The event commenced with a warm welcome by Khushi Meena, followed by TIC Dr. Satheesh Perumalla, who introduced the esteemed speaker, Dr. Rupamanjari Hegde from Azim Premji University. Dr. Hegde, a distinguished academic, specialises in the education sector, particularly focusing on Master of Education (M.Ed.) programs and careers in Early Childhood Education. Her talk shed light on the diverse career prospects in education and the various challenges within the system.

At the heart of the discussion was an exploration of the Indian education system, which comprises over 90 lakh teachers and more than 30 crore children. Dr. Hegde pointed out the complexities of teaching in India, particularly due to linguistic diversity and the socio-economic conditions of students. She emphasised the challenges faced by marginalised communities, including tribal populations, children in remote areas, and those affected by gender and disability-based inequalities. Additionally, religious and caste-based discrimination further complicate access to education. These disparities highlight the urgent need for trained professionals who can navigate these challenges and ensure equitable learning opportunities for all.

The conversation then shifted to the progress made in the education sector. Dr. Hegde discussed ongoing curriculum reforms, improvements in textbooks, and the impact of the Right to Education (RTE) Act. While significant strides have been made in school enrolment, issues such as corporal punishment, hidden discrimination, and socio-economic class divide still persist. Gender and caste roles within the schooling system continue to shape educational experiences, making it imperative to address systemic biases and create inclusive learning environments.

Recognising the pressing need for qualified educators, Dr. Hegde elaborated on the significance of pedagogy and the education ecosystem. She explained the details of the postgraduate programme in Master of Arts (MA) in Education Programme, which includes field practice, practicum-based learning, and an in-depth focus on early childhood care and education (MA ECCE). She also detailed the various scholarships available to support students pursuing careers in education.

The session concluded with an engaging Q&A segment, where participants inquired about research opportunities available at the postgraduate level in the country, and also the different certificate and diploma courses offered by the university. Dr. Hegde's insightful responses reinforced the vast career possibilities in education and the need for passionate educators dedicated to shaping future generations.
