EVENT REPORT

Name of the event: Orientation Programme of the Department of Commerce

Date: August 4, 2025

The Department of Commerce's Orientation Programme began with faculty members of the Department of Commerce welcoming first-year students to the new academic year. Through a structured session, students were introduced about Department's academic framework, faculty members, and expectations, setting a clear and encouraging tone for their journey ahead. The purpose of the Orientation Programme was to mark the beginning of a new academic journey, introduce students to the Department of Commerce, and foster a sense of clarity and belonging. The sessions were appreciated and positively received by all participants. The Commerce Orientation Programme unfolded across a classroom, where faculty members engaged directly with first-year students in a focused group. The session offered insights into departmental values, academic pathways, and student responsibilities. The whole setting encouraged open dialogue, making the experience both informative and welcoming for the freshers. In essence, the Commerce Orientation Programme served as a meaningful starting point for the academic year 2025-26, bridging freshers with faculty and departmental values. The session laid a strong foundation for student engagement, setting a tone of clarity, connection, and enthusiasm for the journey ahead. The Orientation programme was attended by the all faculty members of the Department of Commerce. The Orientation Programme for the 2025-26 batch was a significant step in easing the transition of students into university life. It provided a clear roadmap for their academic journey, ensuring they felt informed, motivated, and aligned with the Department of Commerce's expectations. The programme concluded with a vote of thanks and a photo session of the new batch with the faculty.
